

Lavender Room Reflections

During the month of October, the children have had a lot of opportunities to learn through their senses. To initiate our sensory exploration, we constructed a mini pumpkin & gourd "patch" from the generous donations we received from our parents. Thank you so much!

The children explored different sizes, shapes, textures and colors by rolling them, pushing them in carts, and carrying them from one place to another. These activities provided great exposure to concepts such as weight, gravity, and quantity which will help develop pre math skill sets.

We also had a big birthday in our classroom as Maddison turned one. Her and her family were generous enough to donate a beautiful book called On my beach by Sara Gillingham and Lorena Siminovich, which the children have already enjoyed reading together.

Lastly, we are happy to report that the children have been getting in the routine of the classroom schedule and have been interacting well with one another. We will continue to build routine and consistency in the coming months, which will help to build confidence in themselves and the environment.
